

A cat lover :
Craig Grant

In Caboodle ranch

Craig Grant bought a tree farm far away from the city and turned it into a sanctuary for all the cats he has rescued.

It's hard to imagine that once he was not a cat lover and did not want cats until he met his son's cat Pepper.

He also got to experience what it is like raising a litter of kittens.

Something had changed, he didn't want to give them up.

Craig found a tree farm and settled down there for his fur babies.

Over the next several months, he rescued more and more homeless and abandoned cats.

The number of new residents kept going up, so
Craig expanded the sanctuary to make more room for the animals.

The farm was named Caboodle Ranch and is now a permanent home for all the homeless, rescued cats.

Each of them has a sad story of their past,
but now they are living in heaven.

Craig has built many beautiful cat houses and decorated the place with vibrant colors and tons of liveliness.

All the cats are spayed and neutered.

Don't forget to visit Caboodle Ranch
(non profit rescue center) at their website.

The end !

You can also see videos on You Tube

<http://www.caboodleranch.org/videos.html>

Texte transmis par
Renée Maufroid et mis en page par
Agnès Pihuit

My-teacher.fr