

List of video games for teenagers

<https://www.commonsemmedia.org/lists/best-video-games-for-teens>

	Plants Vs. Zombies: Garden Warfare 2 is a cartoony third-person shooter that pits flowers and other flora against formerly living humans. But as shooters go, this isn't nearly as intense or bloody as most. Most of the guns are cartoony, which makes the combat feel more like paintballs than anything you'd see in a real war.		The Deadly Tower of Monsters is an action/adventure game that parodies classic late-night '70s science-fiction movies. Players make their way up the titular "Deadly Tower of Monsters," fighting against giant gorillas, fire-breathing dinosaurs, toxic-waste monsters, flying saucers, and more. The violence in the game is framed as scenes from the faux "movie," with actors in all the roles.
	Abzu is an adventure game focusing on exploration and discovery under the surface of the ocean. The game leaves players to their own devices, without any scripted dialogue, leaving both discoveries and events open to interpretation. The game spotlights the ocean life that lives around the underwater ruins, including having the player interact with those creatures.		Blackwood Crossing is a first-person adventure about sadness after a loss, growing up, and letting go of the past. There are no enemies to fight, high scores to beat, or inappropriate content; just an environment to explore and observe and characters to listen to.
	Child of Light is a turn-based role-playing game with a cast composed mostly of strong female characters, including a young princess, her friends, and several female villains. The heroines are clever, caring, resourceful, and independent. In battle they and their male companions wield swords and magic, but there's no gore or sensational violence.		Middle School Confidential 1: Be Confident in Who You Are is a book app about a group of friends who help bolster one another's self-esteem in the face of teasing, bullying, or mere self-doubt. These young protagonists feel bad about themselves because of their height, weight, grades, athletic skills, self-image, etc. But their friends always know what to say to turn things around and give them perspective.
	Mayan Mysteries is a story-based game in which players follow explorers on their journey to discover various artifacts and uncover details about the Mayan culture. Players read a lot about the Mayan civilization, from its geographical details to its historical significance, and everything in between. Along the way, the game quizzes players about what they have read, and they must answer questions correctly in order to continue.		Stop Disasters! is a free online simulation games where kids will watch a disaster happen to a community from a top-down perspective. After preparing for the ensuing disaster, kids watch a wild fire engulf homes and burn them to the ground, or a hurricane blow off the top of buildings.
	Mirror's Edge Catalyst is a first-person free-running action game set in a futuristic dystopia with relatively little violence. The game's heroine, a strong, smart woman, fights when she must, but she uses only her fists and feet rather than weapons and refrains from killing enemies. She even speaks out against violence when talking to more radicalized elements of the rebellion.		Rocket League is a soccer game with cars. Driving dune buggies, sports cars, trucks, and even an old roadster, players have to bump a really, really large ball into a very big goal. You can do a little hop move like a soccer player jumping up to do a header, and you can even turn or flip your car in mid-hop to knock the ball into, or away from, the goal.